

-ology: the study of

- biology (noun): the science that studies living organisms
- geology (noun): a science that deals with the history of the earth as recorded in rocks
- zoology (noun): a branch of biology that studies animals
- philology (noun): the study of language and literature
- anthropology (noun): the study of people throughout the world, including history, behavior, adaptation, communication, socialization, culture, and environment
- archeology (noun): the branch of anthropology that studies prehistoric people and their cultures
- ecology (noun): the study of where organisms live and how they interact with their environment
- psychology (noun): the scientific study of the human mind and behavior
- dermatology (noun): the study of the skin and its diseases
- cardiology (noun): the study of the heart and its diseases
- sociology (noun): the study of human cultures, communities, and societies
- criminology (noun): the scientific study of crime and criminal behavior and law enforcement

-ology: the study of

- biology (noun): the science that studies living organisms
- geology (noun): a science that deals with the history of the earth as recorded in rocks
- zoology (noun): a branch of biology that studies animals
- philology (noun): the study of language and literature
- anthropology (noun): the study of people throughout the world, including history, behavior, adaptation, communication, socialization, culture, and environment
- archeology (noun): the branch of anthropology that studies prehistoric people and their cultures
- ecology (noun): the study of where organisms live and how they interact with their environment
- psychology (noun): the scientific study of the human mind and behavior
- dermatology (noun): the study of the skin and its diseases
- cardiology (noun): the study of the heart and its diseases
- sociology (noun): the study of human cultures, communities, and societies
- criminology (noun): the scientific study of crime and criminal behavior and law enforcement